Hallelujah is a song, although it is usually considered a Christmas song and often played in church, the fact is the song Hallelujah of Pentatonix has a very different story. Despite using a large number of religious references and images, he can talk more about the unnecessary relationship with God. About 'Hallelujah' Song, written by singer Leonard Cohen from Canada in 1984, was not originally sold. The song Hallelujah became known and popular after Jeff Buckley made his remake in 1994 on the album Grace. Because it got a good reception Hallelujah was released again as a posthumous single in 1997, ten years after Jeff Buckley died. During an interview in 1988 in Reykjavik-Iceland, Leonard Cohen said that he did not really want the song to be listed as a religious song. Because Hallelujah, which is beautifully packaged with the spices of this religious story is a story about a couple's relationship that is no longer harmonious (this may be due to differences in religion/faith) Hallelujah in Hebrew means praising or praying to God. What's interesting about this song is not only the story of the relationship of lovers, but Leonard Cohen also slipped the story of the prophet David and Samson or the prophet Sam'un. Leonard Cohen, the original songwriter, gives some insight into the lyrics: All Hallelujah, which is perfect and broken has the same value. It is a desire to reaffirm one's faith in life, not in a formal religious way, but with enthusiasm, with emotions. Pentatonix released this cover as the main single from their second Christmas album, A Pentatonix Christmas.
